Fair Association Make Known Building Plans

New Exhibition Hall Is Assured Local Fair Park

Work To Begin Within 10 Days and Be Completed August 7

BOOTHS TO BE SOLD

New Building Means Larger Exhibits in Every Department

A new exhibit hall at Fair Park is now assured and work on same is scheduled to start within the next ten days according to announcements of the fair management. Plans call for the completion of the building by August 7, the date of the Fifth Annual Watermelon Festival. The building will be officially dedicated on the opening day of the annual South-west Arkansas Fair to be held in this city September 22-27 inclusive.

The new building will provide plenty of floor space for handling all educational, agricultural and industrial exhibits as well as approximately 20 commercial booths representing various business institutions of this section of the state. The fair management is selling permanent commercial booths at very reasonable prices. Half of these booths have already been sold and merchants or manufacturers of this city who wish to purchase a permanent booth should communicate with the fair management at once. The committee is receiving requests from other sections of the State and all the booths will very likely be sold by the time work starts on the building.

The erection of a new exhibit hall will mark a very important step in developing a real district fair at Hope. The fair management has the hearty co-operation of the city administration in this work and it should have the co-operation of every civic organization of the city.

A new exhibit hall means larger exhibits in all departments. It also means that exhibits will be well protected from damage and that exhibitors will not hesitate to enter valuable articles in the various departments.

All indications now point to the most successful fair in the history of the institution. The annual catalog is now being distributed and anyone wishing a copy may secure same by calling or writing fair headquarters in the municipal building.

Robins Give Cat Whipping In Tree

Nest Robber Comes To Grief Rescued By Firemen

AUGUSTA, Mo., June 20.—(UP)—The local fire department was called out to rescue a tomcat which had become embroiled in battle with a flock of robins.

Evidently the cat had climbed a tree to rob the robins' nest. When the birds resented the attack they began to peck at the cat's back. Unfortunately the tomcat's instinct of self-preservation instead of retreating to the ground he climbed the tallest branches and there became fair game for the enraged robins.

Norton H. Plummer saw his plight and called Fire Chief McCurdy, who summoned Lon Hill, another fire fighter. The three managed to rescue the dazed animal, its body covered with cuts from the robins' beaks.

Texarkana Boy Fatally Injured

Dies In Hospital After Being Struck By an Automobile

TEXARKANA, June 20.—Charles Roach, 11, was fatally injured Thursday night when an automobile driven by Victor Ghio struck him as he rode his bicycle on Texas avenue near Twelfth street.

The child died at Michael Meagher hospital at about 9 p. m., one hour after the accident occurred. He died while surgeons were making X-ray examination in an effort to determine his injury. He had not regained consciousness.

Ghio said shortly after the boy's death that he had made an attempt to avoid striking him, but that the youth was riding in a swaying motion, turning about in front of him and driving almost in front of him.

Ghio and Roy L. Motz were riding together when the accident occurred, both being on the way to the home of Motz. Both men told police that the accident was unavoidable.

Although an investigation of the accident was under way after police learned that the child was seriously injured, the result of their findings could not be learned shortly after the death of the boy. Officials said an extensive investigation would be made before a decision was announced.

H. P. Stephens, proprietor of the Chrysler Motor company at Twelfth street and Texas avenue, said he was sitting on the sidewalk a few feet from where the accident occurred. He said the boy was thrown fully 10 feet into the air.

Mrs. J. E. Roach, mother of the boy, said she was at their home at 1416 West Twelfth street when the tragedy occurred. She is a Salvation Army worker.

Chicago's New Police Chiefs Begin Clean-Up

Adcock To Fight Crime Outside and Bribery in Department

CAN BREAK UP CRIME

One Out of Five Police-men Said to Have Been Paid By Racketeers

CHICAGO, June 20.—(AP)—John H. Alcock, the "iron man" who has been made acting commissioner of police Thursday swung a two edged sword that aimed at gangsters without the law and dishonest officers within.

The new commissioner had this injunction from Mayor Thompson: "Your first job is to capture every gangster in Chicago. Your second is to get the evidence that will send every one of them either to the penitentiary or to the electric chair. You have a free hand: You will not be interfered with."

Alcock himself announced his intention of purging the police department of crooked officers. The Herald and Examiner Thursday quoted him as saying to certain friends that one out of every five men in the police department is or has been on the payroll of racketeers. The ratio, he was quoted as saying, prevailed in every rank, from patrolman to captain.

The murder of Alfred (Jake) Lingle, Tribune reporter, will have a prominent part in the investigation of gangster-politico alliances, Alcock said for authorities believe this slaying may provide the key both to gang domination and to police scandal.

The commissioner, following his conference with Mayor Thompson, met with members of the civil service commission, which is in charge of trials of police officers against whom charges are made. He intimated that there might be many such trials, and he wanted assurance that he would get full co-operation and that political influence would not be permitted to protect any accused officer.

Sentence on Gun Charge
Anthony (Red) Kissane, well known gangster, who when arrested for carrying concealed weapons was reported as demanding freedom on the ground that he was "working for Lingle," was convicted Wednesday night and faces a maximum sentence of a year in jail. In an interview outside the courtroom with a Tribune reporter, Kissane denied ever mentioning Lingle's name or of ever "working" for the newspaperman.

The acting commissioner, like his predecessor, William Russell, blamed prohibition and the selling of beer by means of syndicates for Chicago's present crime situation.

He was asked if gangs are well organized as generally reported. "Oh, better," he replied. "Crime has become so efficient today, so progressive, that no one has caught up with it."

"And can they be broken up," he was asked.

"There is no reason in the world why they cannot be," he answered. "It is very simple—enforce the law. Murder by hired gunmen can be stopped. Just as soon as you start to electrocute them, they'll stop. There's not one but who will squeal like a rat when you get the goods on him."

Mrs. Lingle, the slain reporter's widow, appeared Wednesday in probate court and asked for letters of administration. A petition filed by her said that Lingle left an Illinois estate net in excess of $5000. This, according to the petition, represented Lingle's personal property, and did not include the Lingle summer home in Indiana.

Man Who Tried to Attack Girl Is Being Sought

CAMDEN, June 20.—A white man who attempted to criminally assault a 12-year-old Camden girl was being sought by officers throughout southern Arkansas Thursday night.

He parked the car and attempted advances toward the child, who started screaming. Her outcry caused her assailant to abandon his advances. He drove her back to town and put the screaming child out on a street corner.

She gave Sheriff Arthur Ellis a good description of the man and a warrant for his arrest was issued.

House Spends Day In Celebration

BRANTFORD, Ont., June 20.—(UP)—There's plenty of excitement and confusion attendant to a wedding, or a christening, or a golden wedding anniversary celebration, but when all three occur in one's home in one day, it's a real day's work—take it from Mr. and Mrs. David Eames.

Their home recently was the christening of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey T. Moyer's son, by the Rev. D. H. Moyer, the child's grandfather. A little later in the day, Miss Erle Eames, who had acted as godmother at the christening, was wedded to Ross Anderson. After that, all the christening and wedding guests celebrated Mr. and Mrs. Eames' golden wedding anniversary.

Air Cadets Form Chapter In Hope

Already More Than One Hundred Charter Members Join

Hope is to have a chapter of the Air Cadets of America, a national organization. The purpose of the organization is to train potential aircraft designers and inventors, in whom the aviation industry must place its future hopes. The plan is sponsored by a representative group of prominent Cantonians.

Sponsors are: Matt Press, of the Sneider theatre, Elliott Johnson of the Grand theatre and John Martin, local insurance man. The supply dealer is George W. Robinson, according to G. H. Brosius, air cadet organizer of Arkansas who has recently been in the city.

The organization coordinates the work of aircraft model clubs over the nation. All boys in the Air Cadets make model airplanes of different designs, ranging from small two seaters to giant tri-motored Fokkers, with cabin, seats and absolutely fidelity to the original.

The planes are made to fly by means of a powerful rubber which, when wound tightly, contains a great amount of potential energy. Principles used in large aircraft construction must be employed to make successful a flying model. In this manner familiarizing the cadets with the fundamentals of heavier than air construction.

Any boy, not over 21, may join the Air Cadets. Local headquarters are in the Geo. W. Robinson store, West Second street, and materials for building the ships, as required by the club, are now in stock.

To join the club, a boy may go to the Geo. W. Robinson & Co. store where he will be given his "great monkey" button membership card and free kit for constructing the first model. After the kit, has been obtained the only additional tools which will be necessary for the construction are a sharp knife and a small hammer.

Badges and awards for excellence in construction of certain models are part of the club's offering to members. Any person may join the club, but contests are open only to those under 25 years of age.

As soon as a member has built his first model, he receives a pilot's badge and is given the rank of pilot. When the member has made successfully a full sized scale model of 24 inches wing spread, which will fly and is passed by judges as a correct A. C. model, he will receive the cadets' official "ace" insignia.

Indoor and outdoor airplane model meets will be staged by the local chapter. The membership now is open to all wishing to join.

Hoover at the Cross-Roads

THIS is the fashion of newspapers nowadays to judge national economic issues on something besides strict party lines.

It is perfectly possible for a staunch Democratic newspaper like The Star to follow farm relief and the tariff bill with greater interest in their effect on national business than any bearing they may have on party success.

Unquestionably the business judgment and government-ship of the Republican secretary of the treasury, Andrew Mellon, has commanded high admiration among Democrats as well as Republicans. From a strict party viewpoint it has been one of the most disheartening things that the Democratic party has had to contend with for the last ten years.

But a new factor has entered the national arena within the current month, and it concerns President Hoover. It has been freely rumored in news dispatches from Washington that the president may remove Alexander Legge as head of the Federal Farm Board. The foundation for this report apparently is the hostile attitude taken toward the board by Julius Barnes, one-time president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and close friend of Mr. Hoover in the days when he was secretary of commerce.

We see the president swayed on the one hand by Mr. Legge in the first attempt of the federal government to extend organized marketing facilities to the farmer; and on the other hand, by the representative of highly organized industry and commerce which has already profited by federal tariffs and needs no further aid.

President Hoover is at the cross-roads—of his own career, rather than any crisis of the nation. For the opposition of the United States Chamber of Commerce to the Federal Farm Board, and the bitter speeches of Mr. Barnes, have already confirmed the Farm Board as something worth while in the minds of the voters.

It needed just that kind of attack to convince the nation that we are at last on the point of getting somewhere in federal aid for the agricultural states.

No true farm relief can ever be obtained without raising trouble among the industrial interests, just as no industrial tariff has ever been enacted without opposition from agricultural quarters.

Hoover and the Republican party carried the agricultural West in 1928 on a pledge to do something for the farmer. They picked Alexander Legge to head the Farm Board, one of the great business executives of the nation. Legge has taken his job so seriously that the United States Chamber of Commerce, thoroughly alarmed, would now intercede with Hoover to have him removed.

It is a fight that must ultimately come to a head. The Democratic party, historic champion of unorganized toilers, may well presume that Mr. Legge is the key to the national political situation. The Republican party is married to him, and hesitates at divorce for fear of the Western voters, yet within the party councils it must be obvious that Eastern industrial groups which are footing the Republican bill must eventually have their way.

How well Mr. Hoover fares in patching up that which is beyond mending, remains to be seen. Meanwhile, the earnest figure of Alexander Legge, who quit the harvester trust to launch an unselfish experiment in behalf of the nation's farmers, stands as a stern and uncompromising sentry on the Republican horizon. Later events will tell us whether that horizon is an economic dawn or a political sunset.

The Case Against War

THE case for international armament reduction has seldom been put more clearly or convincingly than in the recent address made by President James Rowland Angell of Yale University to that institution's graduating class.

Discussing the general question of world peace, Dr. Angell said:

"Of all the nations of the earth we are most powerful and have least at stake in any sheer question of armament. On us above all others therefore it rests to take generous and liberal attitudes, disregarding the pettifoggery efforts to match other nations inch for inch on the length of our guns and pound for pound on the tonnage of our vessels.

"One need not be a professed pacifist to realize the grotesque futility of war as a means for the just settlement of international issues and its utterly irrational wastage of life and treasure. With the increasingly lethal character of the modern means of warfare, the time is rapidly approaching when even the fire-eating politician must hesitate to advocate armed struggle.

"With the Peace Pact, the League of Nations and the International Court, from two of which our timid nationalists shy as too dangerous for us to contemplate, war should be made humanly impossible. But this will not occur unless the men of your generation so decree, and, if you do not so decree, you and your children with you may well be blotted out in the utter ruthlessness of the next war. This is not idle speculation, it is grim fact."

It is right there that President Angell strikes the note that must be sounded incessantly if the move for world peace is to succeed. If the race eventually reaches the point where it will put war out of existence, it will do so, not because of any appeals to its altruism, but simply because it comes to realize that war is too deadly a game to be played any longer. Dr. Angell's remarks deserve a wide audience and close study.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—With Congress out of the way, say Mr. Hoover's friends, things are going to be different.

The president will now have a chance to do his real stuff. He will lose little time in convincing the country that the name "One-Term Herbert," which has become somewhat popular in Washington, must be forgotten. His fine administrative mind will be brought into play and he may even succeed in convincing everyone that we would be better off with no Congress at all. Or, at least, no Senate. And by the time Congress convenes again in December the Hoover administration will be hailed as a success.

He Works Best Alone

All that may sound rather optimistic, but there is little doubt that Mr. Hoover functions best when the two houses are not in session. In the first month of his administration, before the special session convened, he looked stronger than he has looked at any time since.

In the meantime nothing has happened, say the Hoover partisans, to prevent the Chief executive from carrying out his program. The whole thing is he wants to—and dares. Before the tariff wrecks Mr. Hoover—in case it threatens to do that—Mr. Hoover will be able to wreck the tariff. He will be able to reorganize the tariff commission as well as the rate structure. In fact, Mr. Hoover's friends say that he faces the issue created by the new tariff act with the most unbounded confidence.

For instance, it is pointed out, the final form of the tariff bill fits his purposes perfectly. It carries a flexibility provision under which he can rewrite the whole thing if he wants to—and dares. Before the tariff wrecks Mr. Hoover—in case it threatens to do that—Mr. Hoover will be able to wreck the tariff. He will be able to reorganize the tariff commission as well as the rate structure. In fact, Mr. Hoover's friends say that he faces the issue created by the new tariff act with the most unbounded confidence.

Elbert Hubbard Fete Is Started at East Aurora

EAST AURORA, N. Y., June 18.—(UP)—A four-day celebration commemorating the 74th anniversary of the late Elbert Hubbard's birth started here today at the scene of his literary labors.

Admirers and disciples of the western New York sage gathered from all parts of the country to pay tribute to his memory at Roycrofters' headquarters. An elaborate program of musicals, concerts and lectures has been arranged by Hubbard's son.

Unveiling of an heroic bronze statue of the philosopher by his old friend, Saint Joanne O'Connor, Irish sculptor, was made the occasion for the gathering. The statue has been set up on a rock brought by O'Connor from Ireland, near the place where Hubbard lost his life when the Lusitania went down.

It depicts Hubbard as a robust young man, seated on a rock with his walking stick held in one hand as if resting from a long tramp. O'Connor lived at Hubbard's East Aurora colony for several years when himself a struggling young artist.

Clarence Darrow, Chicago criminal lawyer, also a one-time intimate friend of Hubbard, is to be the principal speaker. Some of his earliest books were published by Hubbard and printed in the East Aurora shops.

Among persons invited to attend the ceremonies are Calvin Coolidge, Sir Charles Hignam, Thomas Edison, Henry Ford, Secretary of Labor Jus. J. Davis, Carrie Jacobs Bond, Stickland Gilliland, Bruce Barton, Billy Sunday, Edward Howe, William G. McAdoo and K. M. Landis.

Mellon Aid To Hoover Told

Will Erwin Gives Treasury Secretary's Exact Words

NEW YORK, June 20.—(UP)—The two sentences of Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon which swung the Presidential nomination to Herbert Hoover in the hotly-fought Republican convention at Kansas City, were revealed today by Will Erwin, close friend and biographer of the president.

Erwin, in an article in the American magazine, points out that although a Hoover landslide seemed to be on, his nomination was by no means assured two days before the final vote, when Secretary Mellon arrived at the convention city.

Bitter- and supporters of Calvin Coolidge, and boosters for Charles E. Hughes, met Mellon at the station and hurried him to a conference in a hotel room. They were willing to make a lottery. If Mellon would name any candidate except Hoover and would throw the Pennsylvania vote his way, they would unite to support him.

The Old Battle Line

Heavyweight championship line comes again, old tradition renewed. Tales of the champions from the Sullivan-Corbett days down to the present are told with fresh color. Of all the champions from that day to the present, only one still lives, the names of Fitz and Sullivan being missing from the roll call.

It would be interesting to see the seven there in the ring at Yankee Stadium when Sharkey and Schmeling square off. To have them introduced, these men of other days. What stories of old battles they could tell!

Corbett, oldest of the seven, could tell how he beat down the great American champion, Jess Willard. He could turn to Jeff, and tell him to take up the tale from there. Fitz defeated Corbett and in his turn, Jeff beat Fitz. Then, just for good measure, Jeff beat Corbett, too, and finally retired.

Tommy Burns could take up the story from there, telling how he beat Jack Root and finally went down before the mighty punches of Billy Artha. Jess Willard, most wonderful of all the champions, would review the next chapter. Dempsey could go on from there, to be followed with a few well-chosen words by Gene Tunney, if he would condescend.

Now Look at Them

All the champions are fairly well-fixed, I understand, except Johnson and Burns. Johnson wasted most of the money he earned. Burns is a manager of prizefighters, now having under his wing one Humbeck, a Belgian, who never will set the world afire. Corbett has been careful with his change and has made a good living in vaudeville. He has a pretty home on Long Island where he is neighbor to Hyge Igoe, the boxing writer. Jeffries lives comfortably on his California ranch. Willard is happy in the real estate business in Los Angeles. Dempsey still has plenty of money, although he is a free spender. Jack has made good money since leaving the ring, in vaudeville and refereeing, though his Chicago promotional venture cost him some spinach. Of all these, Gene Tunney seems to be the best-fixed, financially and socially.

One of the stories we would like to hear Johnson tell of the old days concerns his battle with Stanley Ketchel at Colma, Calif., in 1909. It was almost a year

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

DEL BISSONNETTE socked one over the wall the other day, with Frederick and Herman on the bases. Herman loafed along and Bissonnette passed him on the way to second. The umpire called Bissonnette out. Babe said he was waiting to see if the ball would be caught. Chris Cagle has been exporting the big fight for a New York paper. He had plenty of experience in that line in the game with Notre Dame. Little Bill Johnston is fighting tuberculosis. For 25 years his name has been familiar on the courts. He has a wonderful lot of courage, and declares he'll win. He's at Ross, Calif. It was Johnston and Tilden who brought the Davis Cup back from Australia in 1920, beating Brooks and Patterson. It was 1927 when the two Bills fell before Lacoste and Cochet.

after Johnson had beaten Tommy Burns in a 14-round battle in Sydney, Australia, a bout stopped by police to save Burns from further punishment.

As the story is told, there was a gentleman's agreement in advance of the Johnson-Ketchel affair. Johnson was not to attack Ketchel too vigorously and Ketchel was supposed to take it easy with Artha. At that time Ketchel was under the management of William Britz and was middleweight champion. It seems the gentleman's agreement did not hold, for Ketchel was sent out to destroy the Big Smoke with a wallop. It was in Round 12.

Ketchel swung one with all his power for Johnson's jaw. But Jack, the greatest defensive boxer the game has ever known, was a second too quick for him. The big black man ducked and the blow fell high upon his cheekbone, knocking him to the floor. Johnson was up immediately and as he came up he brought a tremendous punch from the floor right with him. It caught Ketchel full on the mouth and Ketchel was out for several minutes.

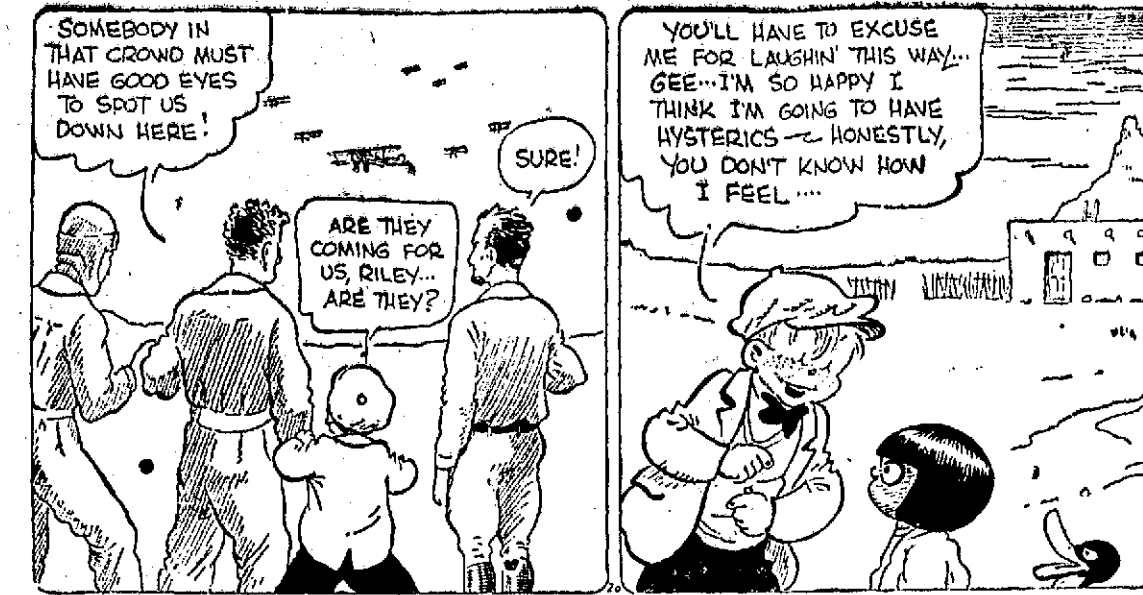

They do say that when Johnson's glove was removed, two of Ketchel's teeth were found buried in the leather.

tween these ancient rivals, it is another story. Or has been, up to this year, at least.

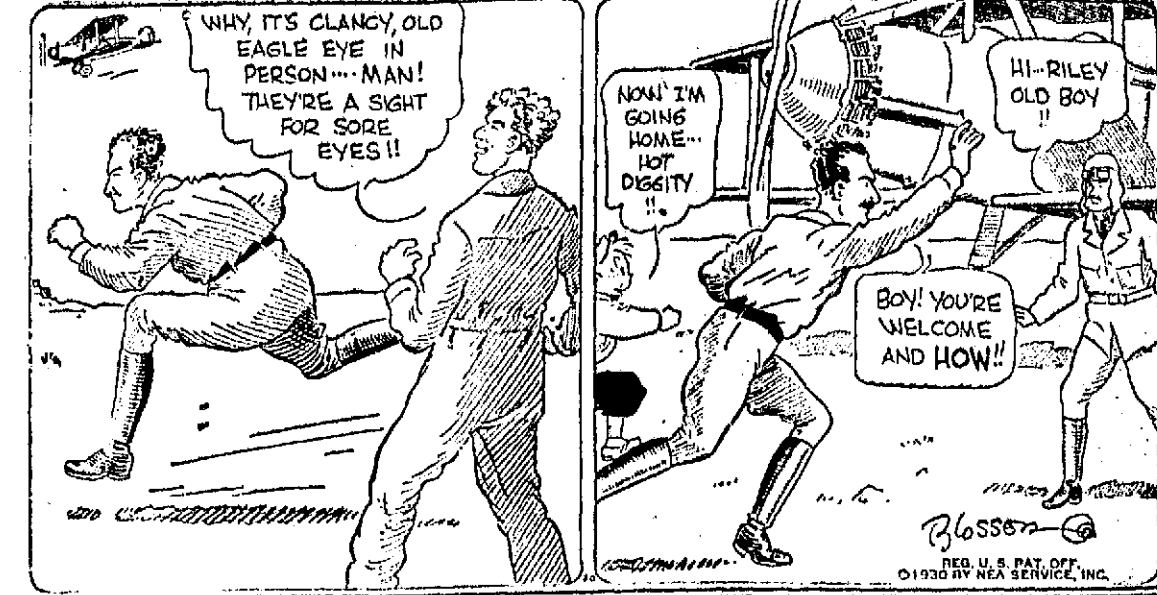

Crispin blades have flashed ahead of the Blue only twice in the past ten years. The Cantabs won in 1920—and again, after six bitter years—in 1927, the only defeat the Blue has met at New London in the four-mile variety race under the coaching hands of square-jawed, taciturn Ed Leader.

Rubber Seed Meal Helps Cows Furnish More Milk

BLACKSBURG, Va., June 20.—(AP)—Dairy cows may eat rubber seed meal, thrive on it and produce more milk.

This discovery has been made through experiments conducted by C. W. Holdaway, professor of dairy husbandry, and Dr. W. B. Ellett, professor of agricultural chemistry at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Rubber seed meal, heretofore considered a worthless by-product from the processing of kernels of the seed of para rubber trees, contains a high percentage of protein and is available in large quantities each year. A comparison of rubber seed meal and the old process linseed meal showed four and three-fourths per cent milk flow in favor of the former.

Rangers End Deer Roundup

District Restocked After Depletion By Foot and Mouth Disease

YOSEMITE, Cal., June 20.—(UP)—After all, the life of the much romanticized cowboy might have been worse, according to a party of rangers here. The rangers came to that conclusion after rounding up a herd of 50 deer for re-stocking the Hetch-Hetchy district of this park.

The rangers, generally conceded to be somewhat more hardy than the average citizen, admitted individually and collectively that rounding up the deer had been one of the toughest assignments ever given them.

Deer in the Hetch-Hetchy district were nearly exterminated when they were slaughtered during the foot-and-mouth epidemic in California in 1925. More than 450 deer still remain in Yosemite valley, after the shipment to the other section of the park. They graze in herds of 20 to 30 over the valley meadows.

Estranged Hubby Finds Dead Wife's Fortune

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—(UP)—A suspicion that his estranged wife had secreted money about her cottage before her death resulted in the discovery by Thomas Lonergan, the husband, of $35,000 in securities and currency hidden in the basement.

Mrs. Lonergan, who died recently, was known to have been thrifty, but the extent of her estate was not known. The woman left a will but did not reveal the hidden place of the securities and money.

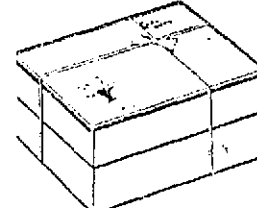

Her husband, to whom she had been married 10 months, left home because of the "scanty table" set by his wife.

The will was made before the woman's marriage to Lonergan, and named her seven children as heirs. Lonergan, however, will attempt to gain his share, he says.

SICK HEADACHE AND DIZZINESS

Relief Found Through the Use of Thedford's Black-Draught.

Greenville, S. C.—"For a number of years, I took Thedford's Black-Draught for biliousness, and as a laxative," writes Mrs. Studie Webb, of 7 DeCamp Street, this city. "I used to have severe sick headaches, when I would let myself get bilious. I would get very nauseated and dizzy. I would have to go to bed."

"After my head quit aching, I would feel weak and dizzy. Seemed like I would drop everything. I would pick up. This dizziness would last two or three days."

"I found that Black-Draught would give relief and seemed to cleanse the system. After I found this out, when I felt a headache coming on, I would take Black-Draught and keep it off. I did this for several years, avoiding a lot of pain and suffering. I can highly recommend Black-Draught."

"The medicine which this South Carolina lady mentions is also recommended by thousands of others because of the benefits it has been to them."

Costs only 1 cent a dose. Try it. Sold everywhere.

PHIL SCOTT HAS OPENED A BEAUTY PARLOR IN LONDON

Back came "the royal bad boy"—to become king! And here you see Roumania's prodigal monarch Carol II, who rode in regal splendor through the streets of Bucharest after the amazing coup d'état which brought him to the throne he once renounced for love. The new ruler is shown at the left in military garb. At the right, in the uniform of a general in the Roumanian Air Force, is his younger brother, Prince Nicholas. This is one of the first pictures to reach this country showing Carol's re-entry into Roumania.

Georgia "Insurrection" Case Reached at Atlanta

ATLANTA, June 19.—(UP)—A legal battle involving the demand of the state for the lives of two white women, two white men, two negroes, indicted under an ancient Georgia statute, "attempt to incite insurrection," was reached on the docket of Fulton county superior court Thursday.

The defendants are affiliated with the left-wing communistic labor movement in America, which has swung south coincident with the comparatively recent thrust to unionize the industry of the southeast.

The frank insistence of the defendants' program for racial equality between whites and blacks injected an element into their cases which their counsel admitted might prove a major initial stumbling block here.

Execution of the cases is led by John H. Hudson, assistant solicitor general of Fulton county, who early in his investigations told the United States attorney that he would demand the death penalty for every communist who came into the county "publicly preaching violent opposition to the state."

Defense counsel is led by William A. McClelland, Macon, one of the south's leading trial lawyers; Oliver C. Hancock, Atlanta; Claude Moore, Atlanta; and E. Sokolov, Atlanta.

Preparation of the defense was aided by the International Labor Defense, and the American Civil Liberties Union.

The defendants are Mary Dalton, Henry Story and Gilmer Brady, charged with "circulating insurrectionary papers for the purpose of inciting insurrection, riot, conspiracy and combined resistance against the lawful authority of the state of Georgia."

Indictment of the six charged that their intent in circulating the alleged insurrectionary literature, was "to abolish, defeat and overthrow by acts of violence the lawful authority of the state of Georgia."

Story and Brady are negroes. Literature specifically mentioned in the indictment included the "Communist Manifesto" of Karl Marx, published in 1848. Incidentally, a copy of this was found on the shelves of Atlanta Public Library by defense investigators, who also discovered it was a required work in a course in economics at Emory University, in De Kalb county.

Sporadic protests against indictment of the defendants have occurred in the south in recent weeks, notably at Memphis, where four persons, including a Southwestern University professor, were jailed on charges of "disturbing the peace. It was alleged the Memphis meeting was to have discussed racial equality, and to have advanced a negro for governor of Tennessee.

Defense counsel admitted to the United Press they were skeptical about gaining an acquittal in Fulton county, but said they were building the cases with a view of appealing to the supreme court of the United States if necessary.

Solicitor Hudson, on the other hand, was equally confident of gaining conviction and of sustaining the verdict through to the highest courts. He admitted Georgia had "the stiffest law" in this respect and frankly suggested that "before any more communists come down here they might better investigate our statutes."

The law in question was first enacted in post Civil war days, and under it one, John T. Gibson, "a free person of color, a preacher," was convicted and sentenced to death in 1868 for allegedly encouraging his congregation to attempt the rescue of one, Charles Fryer, from jail.

Gibson appealed, and in 1869 the state supreme court reversed the verdict of the lower court, Chief Justice Joseph E. Brown holding "we have no difficulty in coming to the conclusion that the penalty applies only to a person guilty of attempting insurrection and not to one guilty of attempting to incite."

Two years later, "attempting to incite" was made a capital crime.

"The Texan" Begins At Saenger Today

Five hundred dollars is what the Liano Kid was worth to the people of Texas back in 1885, dead or alive. He's alive at the Saenger theatre and he's worth a whole lot more than that in entertainment. There are more thrills with Gary Cooper, as the Liano Kid, in "The Texan," than there were even in the great Western outdoor spectacle romance, "The Virginian."

And that's saying a lot.

"The Texan," which opens today at the Saenger theatre, and will continue showing tomorrow, is Paramount's companion picture to "The Virginian." Again Cooper brings to life the spirit of the plainsmen pioneers, this time in a tremendous action drama which takes him from the rolling plains of Texas to the impressive pampas of South America.

Fay Wray is the girl who captures Cooper's heart in this strange love story. Cooper, a Texas badman, enters into a pact to pose as the long lost son of a wealthy South American woman. At the sumptuous hacienda, he wins the heart of the woman's lovely niece, and is accepted as the son of the house. His new interests awaken his better instincts, and he fights to escape his nefarious bargain.

Emma Dunn, as the wealthy senora, gives a moving performance in a really great role. O. Henry wrote the original story which Paramount has made into a truly worthwhile moving picture, and the turns of comedy, drama, humor, pathos and romance make up a really varied entertainment with a strangely moving plot.

Under Old Law Reds Face Chair

Facing possible execution under a law nearly 70 years old, M. H. Powers, 25, above, and Joseph Carr, 19, below, both Communists, were to go on trial for their lives at Atlanta, Ga., on June 17. Alleged to have organized an indoor unemployment meeting of white and negro workers, they were charged with "attempting to incite to insurrection" under an old statute of Reconstruction days which carries the death penalty. Powers is the father of two children.

Bandit Killer Is Slain In Break for Freedom

EL PASO, Tex., June 20.—(UP)—A Mexican bandit, confessed slayer of a Columbus, N. M., stage driver, was held Thursday after a futile attempt to escape.

Frederico Terrazo, 26, was shot to death as he was being taken to Casas Grandes, across the Mexican border, to face a murder charge for the slaying of J. W. McIntyre, the driver.

Lon Chaney, Hollywood's "man of 1000 faces," was a guide for tourists seeking the summit of Pike's Peak. He also served as a timekeeper in Colorado mines and as a paper hanger.

Byrd, Once 'Retired' as Ensign, To Be Honored by Hoover June 20

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd (right) is to be welcomed by President Hoover June 20, a day after his return to the United States. He came back from Little America in the bark City of New York (left).

WASHINGTON, June 18.—(AP)—An ensign retired by the navy 14 years ago will return to Washington June 20 as the youngest of rear admirals, and with the fame of flights over both ends of the earth.

The day after he steps ashore in the United States and receives New York's welcome, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd will bring his entire Antarctic party to Washington and receive from President Hoover a special medal of honor of the National Geographic Society.

The President will greet the explorer and his command twice—shortly after noon at the White House and again at night when the medal is presented.

Rear Admiral Byrd will give his service that has been continuous ever since.

He won his wings as a navy aviator, was in charge of navigational preparations for the first transatlantic flight—that of the navy flying boats in 1919—and served in the bureau of aeronautics.

It was not until late in 1924 that congress' attention was called to a young officer who was a leader in naval aviation, but who was performing active duty with no chance of promotion—because he was carried on the navy rolls as "retired."

In 1925 he was voted the rank of lieutenant commander on the retired list, shortly before he was given command of his expedition to the North pole, where he won a second promotion.

The rear Admiralship was voted him last year after his now historic South pole flight, and special medals for his entire party have been voted by congress.
